Operators Take Advantage of a Lull and Timidly Start Bearish Movement.

EXTREME CAUTION SHOWN

Moderate Liquidation Is Induced by Subsequent Recession in Prices.

NEW YORK, August 13.—The manner in which the market acted to-day proved very puzzling to the conjectures that attempted to explain it. A lull in the activities of the powerful party in the speculation which has favored the advance by all the devices of leadership and manipulation, was evident. This bear movement was conducted with extreme caution and with signs of timidity covering operations being resumed at small recessions in prices. The amount of liquidation induced by the recession in prices proved moderate, and there was nothing like the precipitancy in unleading with which so prolonged an advance as has occurred usually culminates.

Late in the day the particular weakness of the Rock Island group gave a suggestion of more influential leadership for a bear turn in the market, and the attack on prices became somewhat more aggressive with a weakness of the Rock Island group gave a suggestion of more influential leadership for a bear turn in the market. Camden Man, Supposed Victim of Dog's Bite, Had Been Treated at the Pasteur Institute.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., August 13.—

Strapped to his bed, and snarling and snapping like a dog, Henry Clennans, twenty-three years old, of No. 413 Benson Street, Camden, died in convulsions at the West Jersey Homeopathia Hostial last night from what the physicians declare was hydrophobia. Clennans was bitten by a pug dog a month ago, and after being treated at the Pasteur Institute, New York, for cighteen days, he was discharged, apparently immune from the malady of Sunday he was operated upon at the hospital for appendicitis, and shortly afterwards he betrayed symptoms of Tables.

Sunday he was operated upon at the hospital for appendicitis, and shortly afterwards he betrayed symptoms of rebies.

Clennans was employed as a driver by W. C. Davis a Camden baker. A month ago, while delivering bread at the home of a customer in Collingswood, the family's pet pug dog became caught under the porch and was uncable to extricate itself. The dog's mistress asked Clennans to release him. As he did so the carine snapped at him, biting him on the thumb.

Clennans had read a lot about hydrophobia, so he thought he would be on the safe side. He went to the Pasteur Institute, and was under treatment for eighteen days. Then he was discharged, the physicians believing there was no further danger of his developing the malady.

He returned home, and on Saturday became violently ill, complaining of severe pains in the abdomen. He was taken to the hospital, and the physicians, diagnosing the ailment as appendict, performed an operation on Sunday. The operation was pronounced successful.

On Monday afternoon, however, Clennans's facial muscles began to twitch, and as this symptom became worse he was seized with a convulsion. A hurried consultation among the blyscicians from hydrophobia. He became rapidly worse. He was strapped to his bed and srapped at every one who approached him. He died last night in great agony. Dr. A. F. Ironsides gave a certificate of death from hydrophobia. Clennans is survived by a widow and a six-weeks-old child. The funeral will be held on Friday.

PIGS WILL SLEEP UPSTAIRS

Dwellers in "Sanitary Sty" Will be Warmed by Steam.

DANVILLE, PA., August 13.—Work is under way on the new "sanitary pigsty," at the Danville State Hospital for the Insane, for which the Legislature appropriated $6,000, and palatial quarters are promised for the pigs to be housed there.

The sty will be warmed by steam heat, lighted by electricity, and the hogs will not partake of common swill, but will feast on "cooked food." This implies that as a feature of the "sanitary apparatus and equipment" the piggery is to have a cuisine. Protected from the cold and with their diet under constant surveillance, the hogs could not do otherwise than prosper.

They will not be permitted to wallow in the mire, because there will be no mire. Everything will be kept immaculate. The building will be of two stories, and in all probability the hogs will sleep above stairs.
